

Interrupting Vs. Interjection Vs. Interaction

Responding well to “interruptions” can vary depending on context and many other factors.

Here are some general tips for handling interruptions gracefully:

Stay Calm and Patient: Don’t rush, take a second before responding.

Listen and Evaluate: Sometimes interruptions may offer valuable insights.

Acknowledge the Interruption: Politely acknowledge the speaker.

Choose your response: Depending on the situation, you can choose to address it directly or defer it for later.

Follow-up: If needed, politely inform the person that you will address their concern after the current conversation or meeting.

Set Boundaries: If you frequently experience interruptions, consider setting healthy boundaries to minimize them.

Redirect the Conversation: Graciously guide the conversation back to the original topic or purpose.

Model Respectful Communication: Set an example of respectful communication by avoiding interrupting others yourself. Practice active listening and waiting for your turn to speak.

Each of us must learn and apply all the nuances of this verse to our lives.
“...speaking the truth in love, we are to grow up in all aspects...”
